Marking the trails for our members

December 2025

From the Presidents Saddle

Year-end activities are normally a furious pace to get everything done and to celebrate wonderful holidays with family and friends. Perhaps even getting some rides worked in as our mild weather is so conducive to being outdoors is a priority as well. One major priority for members of our Southwest chapter needs to be to remember and thank our generous sponsors by faithfully shopping and referring business to them whenever possible. Also remember to ask for a manager to express thanks and to share you and we are faithful to them as sponsors of our outdoor causes. I do this often and find the vendors are ready to continue their sponsorship and usually say they are happy to support our mission. It is surprising how a small but targeted thank you seems to mean so much to them.

Our tireless and faithful Chapter officers deserve our support and appreciation as well (I can say this as I am leaving for a year). The effort to host our auction/annual dinner as well as coordinate with public land groups and discharge duties as treasurer and secretary and Newsletter publisher etc... adds-up to a lot of donated labor and hours. I am always offended by local equestrian riders who choose not to join our chapter for whatever reason. They enjoy the benefits of our organizations efforts to keep incredible riding trails open and available while they sit back and lazily ride on BCHU's reputation and unending devotion to continue lobbying for same. Please do explain to them a checkbook member to our chapter is absolutely welcome and we need the numbers to be large and continued in order to speak with a voice of influence. Your support is VERY important .

♠ 'Twas the Night Before the Auction ♠

BCHU Southwest Edition

'Twas the night before the auction, and all through the hall,
The members were bustling, preparing for all.
The banners were hung, and tables setup with care,
In hopes that our members soon would be there.

With over fifty sponsors and the donations piled high,
The generosity of our donors brings a tear to my eye,
The tables were dressed in their decorative best,
As raffles and auctions brought joy to each guest.

The scent of Dubs BBQ filled the room with its cheer,
A delicious feast for all hungry guests who came near.
Over one hundred gathered, mingling with friendship and pride,
Their charitable wallets swung open wide.

Laughter and bidding rose up in the air,
As Roger Christensen, lively auctioned with flair.
Paddles went up, and the totals climbed too—
Thousands was raised, thanks to supporters like you.

New board members were chosen, the chapter renewed,
Fresh energy joining the seasoned and true.
And with hearts full of purpose, one mission stood tall:
Rebuild Pine Valley Campground, an area loved by all.

When the final item was raffled and the night reached its end,
We cheered for our chapter, each neighbor and friend.
And with gratitude glowing, we welcomed with delight
Sweet Tammy Engeness, our new president bright.

So here's to the horses, the mountains, the trails,
To the volunteers' efforts that never do fail.
To a night full of giving, of laughter and light—
BCHU Southwest rode strong through a magical night.

Three Peaks Loop Trail

By Lin Hokana

Great news, by friends. The BLM just cut a loop trail at the Three Peaks Equestrian Obstacle Course. I rode this on a pleasant December Sunday and it was wonderful. This was an easy 4.73-mile ride with little change of elevation. It is a loop, starting and ending at the northwest and northeast corners of the fenced in area of the obstacle course; you can go clockwise or counterclockwise. Woohoo, this is a trail without rocks, which made it inviting to go faster than a walk if and when you like. It was made using a skid steer and a brush hog so it was easy to follow. The trail crosses a dirt road several times (where they go I don't really know) so signage will be installed to delineate it as an equestrian trail.

We need people to get out and ride the trail to help establish it with hoof prints. It took me 1 hour and 21 minutes to make the loop, with some jogging alternating with walking. Besides the usual jack rabbit, I saw a coyote meandering among some trees. It was interesting to see what the equipment exposed - empty beer cans here and there. I wonder how many are scattered throughout the huge expanse of BLM land. And why? Bring a bag along and help remove them when you can, no pun intended.

This site is truly a unique and special feature so let's make use of it and think of what will further enhance its attraction. Water spigots next to the two sets of metal corrals are in the plans. One cannot camp right at the obstacle course but since it's BLM land, dispersed camping close by is allowed.

Come check out the new trail. Happy trails...

Membership is a powerful voice even if you cannot spend a lot of time in support of our cause at this time.

So for now at the end of 2025 please do continue on supporting the cause with whatever level of support you can. Cheerfully encourage our leaders and volunteer to serve whenever possible.

Until next time.... So long!!! John there's legislation pending to prohibit future use of the round hay bales that we see so often in farmers fields.

Apparently animal nutritionists are concerned that cattle can't get a square meal from a round bale ...
